"We've been in Colorado for almost a year now. Our house was built almost 3,000 years ago," he said. "And yet we have a home that's right on the main street of Eagle." Quincy and Jim O'Brien head out to greet a guest on their local morning show. O'Brien, who has done "From the Bong to the Bar" since 2006, said he has seen the show grow. A number of such devices are available, ranging from small, lightweight devices for at-home use to large, heavy devices for use in hospitals. In general, such devices include a housing configured to be held in a user's hand during operation, a pneumatic mechanism for applying pneumatic pressure, and a foot attached to the housing to apply the applied pressure to the patient. Since many devices can be heavy and cumbersome, while providing a therapeutic benefit, they can cause strain or discomfort on the caregiver. For example, some devices include a magnet to help attach the device to the caregiver's nail bed, which can be uncomfortable. In addition, when the device is worn for a long period of time, the magnet can be difficult to locate, and can become difficult to replace. Additionally, the magnet can affect the performance of the pneumatic mechanism.
